The whimsical watercolour illustrations inside a neatly bound portfolio were what first brought BA Fashion Design Technology: Womenswear graduate Midori Nohara under our radar.

Although a design student, Nohara, also has a look book on display in the Library for the duration of the exhibition. This book provides guests with an insight into the creative and development process behind the collection. Dusty pinks melt into violet hues to form the elongated free hand illustrations.

“It is such an honour to be part of the show this year and to have my work displayed alongside people from an array of courses” explains Nohara.

With only four more days to go, be sure to wander on into our showspace and see this talented students work up close.
